Dear Marilyn:

Indeed, I do remember you and am much delighted to have word of your whereabouts. Unfortunately, I don't have any staff positions open at this time, though I would like very much to keep your resume on file. And I will forward a copy of it to the Personnel Office, since there is a real effort being made on affirmative action at the State Department. Due to budgetary constraints, there are not a lot of openings. Ms. Georgiana Prince will be the person to whom I shall direct your papers. If you have fluency in a second language, it might be very useful to send her a note telling her that.

In the meantime, you might want to try on the Hill and at HEW in the Department of Education. Many Members of Congress are interested in the areas where you have had the most experience and they often hire aides and assistants with your kind of expertise.

I did enjoy hearing from you and hope that we'll have a chance to sit and visit. The next couple of months are incredibly full, so we'll have to try for a period in the fall.

Sincerely,

Patricia M. Derian
Coordinator of Human Rights and Humanitarian Affairs
